ECEPTIONIST EXPANDS EUROPEAN SERVICE

Manchester, England – Eceptionist, Inc. has signed an agreement with tds (Dermatology) Limited, an English based health care company, and has begun providing the Eceptionist® Internet based appointment booking service to tds' customers, the company announced today.

Eceptionist allows tds' users to book dermatology appointments and manage the e-health process between the general practitioners, nurses, dermatologists (consultants) and patients in Britain, thereby reducing the waiting period for such consultations.

"Eceptionist allows tds and its users to manage the health care process over the Internet in real-time," said Roger Coomber, Managing Director of tds. "The service allows us to deliver the highest quality of care in the most efficient way possible to the people of Britain."

"Eceptionist is proud to expand our European service with tds," commented an Eceptionist representative, "their reputation for delivering excellent health care is known throughout Britain."

tds will initially be serving National Health Service (NHS) patients in Britain, which is comprised of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Another Eceptionist representative, stated: "This international growth is a great milestone for us and marks the beginning of our worldwide expansion. Eceptionist is honored to assist in meeting British Prime Minister Tony Blair's goal of reducing the NHS waiting lists."

tds (<http://www.tds-telemed.com>) is an English based health care company that provides dermatology services to patients in Britain. The tds service allows National Health Service patients access to dermatology services without the waiting period that NHS patients normally experience. The company plans to expand its services to the United States in the near future.

Eceptionist, Inc., (<http://www.eceptionist.com>), is a privately held company located in Houston,
